APPEAL TO PARTY LOYALTY; PATRIOTIC SUPPORT OF THE REPUBLICAN NOMINEES AND THE UPHOLDING OF THE CONSTITUTION, KEYNOTES OF POLITICAL ADDRESSES

Republicans of Bucks County Participate in Two Gatherings, One Held at Solebury Deer Park and One at Island Park, Morrisville — State Senator Theodore Lane Bean, Montgomery County, Speaker at Middle District Affair, While Assemblyman Thomas B. Stockham Addresses Morrisville Gathering — Issues Are Discussed and Much Interest and Enthusiasm Is Shown — Sports Program Enjoyed.

Appeal to party loyalty; patriotic support of the Republican nominees and upholding the constitution were the keynotes of addresses made at two Republican rallies in Bucks County on Saturday. One rally was held at Solebury Deer Park under the auspices of the Republicans of the Middle district of the county; and the second was held at Island Park, Morrisville. Both were attended by enthusiastic Republican men and women from various sections of the county.

State Senator Theodore Lane Bean, Montgomery County, made the keynote address at Solebury, and Assemblyman, Thomas B. Stockham, Bucks County, was the principal speaker at Island Park. Both meetings were enlivened by a program of sports which preceded the addresses of the day.

Senator Bean was elected in March in Montgomery County by an overwhelming Republican majority, against the "hand-picked" candidate of Governor George H. Earle. Senator Bean made his issue squarely against the New Deal while his opponent, backed by the national and state Democratic administrations, advocated the policies of President Roosevelt and Governor Earle. The speaker on Saturday showed that he had not lost any of the fire of his campaign and took a swing at Governor Earle on his recent admission that he is backing the candidacy of his friend and family lawyer, Henry L. Barnes, former Secretary of Revenue, for judge of the Superior Court in order to secure personal control of that tribunal, the highest in the state.

State representative, Thomas B. Stockham, in a fervent appeal for party loyalty in his address at Island Park said: "The Primary system is one of the forms of government that gives every citizen an opportunity to seek office. All cannot be nominated. If those who are unfortunate enough not to be nominated show a patriotic spirit and will get back of the successful nominees at the November election, we will have a wonderful Republican victory."

State Senator Bean said in part: "I know I speak to Americans who really love their country. I know I speak to men and women who are apprehensive of the future of that country and that country's people. For six years this country has been undergoing the most profound depression of its history, and the only method our government has employed to rid us of it, is to tax us more and more for carrying out schemes which begin to look like the pouring of water into a sieve, so far as results are concerned."

The NRA decision by the Supreme Court had consequences in Washington that were completely unpredictable before that high court read the Blue Eagle death warrant. Instead of curbing the Administration's mania for unconstitutional legislation, it resulted in drives for new laws of questionable legality on several fronts.

"Every law, here or elsewhere, that has been enacted to coerce or interfere with business and the way business is carried on has been a failure; it has resulted in more evil than good. Every new political DEAL in history, including Mr. Roosevelt's, has been followed shortly by a new SQUEAL, not of delight but distress. We have twenty thousand laws in this country to govern the railroads alone—and is there a single railroad in this country that is prosperous? Is not the future of all of them extremely precarious?"

"The fact is, and it is high time the

High-Lights in Speech of Senator T. Lane Bean

I believe that history demonstrates that both morality and business have fared better when legislative bodies have let them alone.

Every law, here or elsewhere, that has been enacted to coerce or interfere with business and the way business is carried on has been a failure; it has resulted in more evil than good.

We, Republicans, have an issue which we did not seek, but which has come to us. It is "Stand by the Constitution." Let us be worthy of it, intelligent enough to see it and seize it, and with it elect a Republican president.

For six years this country has been undergoing the most profound depression of its history, and the only method our government has employed to rid us of it, is to tax us more and more for carrying out schemes which begin to look like the pouring of water into a sieve, so far as results are concerned.

The NRA decision by the Supreme Court had consequences in Washington that were completely unpredictable before that high court read the Blue Eagle death warrant. Instead of curbing the Administration's mania for unconstitutional legislation, it resulted in drives for new laws of questionable legality on several fronts.

people learned it, we have always been living under a great political superstition, namely, the assumption that the aches and ills of the body politic can be cured by means of legislation, when the truth is that both the material and moral ones are largely caused by the very agency invoked for their cure. But we have never found one instance in history in which the enacted law worked.

"Puritan legislation did not make the people good, and it did not improve business. No legislation ever has. I believe that history demonstrates that both morality and business have fared better when legislative bodies have let them alone.

"It is useless to appeal to that group of law makers called the Democratic majorities of Congress or State legislatures. It is apparent the Democratic party has forsaken its father's home and all of its traditions, and 'looney' with its suddenly acquired power has, to use a colloquial expression, 'gone hay wire.'

"I do not fear 'Communism.' I have faith in our people, that they are willing now to rise up, under intelligent, fearless men and women, under the banner of the Republican party, and seize the reins of government from those who have betrayed their country, violated their vows and every plank of their platform, and re-establish this land of ours, with the slogan:

"We stand for sanity"
"We stand for the Constitution"
"We keep our promises."

Here and now is the great Republican opportunity.

Only a few brief months ago nobody expected the Republicans to win the next election; it was even questioned whether the Republican party would not soon disintegrate. But a marked change is now visible on the political horizon. Ah, yes, my Republican friends, and those of you who perhaps left our party ranks in the last national campaign, we have here now an opportunity to succeed, the like of which seldom presents itself. A great statesman to lead the party will also be needed. Yes, a great statesman capable of being a great leader as well. Soon out of the rich treasury of American men, that will come forth or be brought forth.

"My friends, the tide has turned. It is no longer Spring with Mr. Roosevelt. You know and I know that sentiment is cooling toward him, and there is much evidence in various places to indicate the truth of this statement. After over two years it is impossible to classify him with either the liberals or conservatives. The Roosevelt policies have not produced results. The Democratic smile is wearing thin.

"Congress has voted the Democratic administration almost five billion dollars to spend in order to make conditions better, but this administration has been spending money like a drunken sailor for the last two years to the same end, without any profound result. And it will surprise as deeply as it will gratify us, if the additional five billion dollars accomplish more.

"We see that there are still about eleven million men out of employment, that few are making much money, and that among the sufferers the farmers still abide, in spite of ploughed up grain and cotton fields, and the slaughtered pigs. Moreover, the consumer, paying more for his food than he did a year ago, is inclined to be a bit resentful. We know that the Roosevelt administration has kicked the platform upon which the Democratic candidate ran into the discard. Yes, indeed, it begins to look as if they do not know everything in "I've kinda got it on 'em."

"In recent years, Will appeared less on the stage and became more identified with Hollywood. One of his most successful stage appearances, and one which was motivated purely by friendship, was his substitution for Fred Stone in the musical comedy, "Three Cheers," when Stone was injured in an airplane crash in 1928. Will cancelled all his own contracts, flew across the country, and kept the show going in his own inimitable way.

Dorothy Stone, who appeared in the show with Will, described its closing night as one of the saddest and most memorable experiences of her entire stage career.

While in Hollywood, Will was noted among the movie people for his humility. It is said that he sincerely doubted his ability to do justice to almost every role which he portrayed.

Ben Burman, the author of "Steamboat Round the Bend," Will's last picture (which will be released in September), tells the story that Will came to him when work was begun on the production and said:

"Ben, I think you've got a grand yarn here, and I like my part, but I shan't be afraid that I'm not going to be able to play it the way it ought to be done."

Burman claims it was the only time anything like that happened to him in Hollywood.

The sets on which Will worked were notoriously hard to visit, and many prominent people would be turned away, but some old cow-hand friend of Will's, or a pal of his trick riding days, could always secure admittance.

Will would drop whatever he was doing, and with much joking and back-slapping, show the friend around the entire set.

Doubting his own ability as an actor, he nevertheless took an intense personal interest in any part which he played, and because of this interest and because of the directors' confidence in his showmanship, he had great influence over changes in the script. If he didn't like a line, he would simply change it, and his variations were rarely challenged.

Rogers had a reputation for ad libbing when he was on the stage, but most of those who worked with him say that he did not indulge this habit while in Hollywood.

There are countless anecdotes illustrating Will's generosity, but the record of his public charities is in itself an impressive document.

In September, 1926, he helped to raise funds for the victims of the Florida hurricane.

In 1927, he raised $10,000 by personal appearances for Mississippi flood sufferers.

In 1930-31, he toured the mid-West

ROGERS DOUBTED HIS ABILITY AS AN ACTOR

This is the sixth and concluding installment of the life of Will Rogers by James E. Brown

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—(INS)—Although Rogers was a legal resident of Oklahoma, he passed most of his time on his ranch between Beverly Hills and Santa Monica. He always claimed Claremore, Oklahoma, as his home town, however, because, as he sometimes said, he was afraid no one could pronounce the name of his birthplace, Oologah.

In appreciation, the citizens of Claremore named their leading hotel The Will Rogers, a six-story building which he said had "more bath rooms than Buckingham Palace." On receiving word of this honor, Will said:

"I used to envy General Grant and Jesse James because they had cigars named after them. But, shucks, now I've kinda got it on 'em."

In recent years, Will appeared less on the stage and became more identified with Hollywood. LANGHORNE LAD KILLED AS BICYCLE HITS AUTO

Robert Briggs, 9, Dies in Trenton Hospital As Result Of Injuries

TWO MEN ARE INJURED

A nine-year-old Langhorne boy, Robert Briggs, met death as the result of an unusual accident yesterday.

The lad, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris T. Briggs, is said to have crashed into the side of the automobile operated by Mrs. Harry Friedrich, Station avenue, Langhorne, yesterday morning, while riding his bicycle. The boy died as the result of severe head injuries suffered when his head struck the side of the machine.

It is stated by officers who investigated the case, that young Briggs was riding his wheel out of the driveway of his home on Station avenue when he collided with the Friedrich car. He was taken to Mercer Hospital, Trenton, N. J., where death occurred last evening.

The driver of the machine, Mrs. Friedrich, was taken into custody by Patrolman A. P. Diem, of the South Langhorne barracks of the State Highway Patrol, charged with atrocious assault and battery. She was released on her own recognizance, and will face a technical charge of manslaughter.

Robert was a student in Langhorne Manor School, in the third grade.

Howard Knowles, 43, of 231 West 14th street, New York, received severe lacerations of the neck early yesterday morning when an automobile in which he was riding crashed into the guard rail at Oxford Valley. Knowles was thrown through the windshield. W. H. Pullen, 51, of 223 West 14th street, New York, driver of the car, received lacerations of the legs and face.

Both were taken to Mercer Hospital, Trenton, N. J., where Knowles is being held under observation. The two men were on their way to Washington at the time. Highway Patrolman Carfagno investigated.

THE MEDICINE CABINET

Although the purpose of the home medicine cabinet is the protection of health and life, it frequently becomes a source of illness and even death.

The handling of poisons seems to have ample safeguards thrown around it everywhere except in the home. Utmost care is used by the manufacturer who makes it, the physician who prescribes it and the druggist who dispenses it. But as soon as it reaches the home, the safeguards seem to break down. The box or bottle is placed in the medicine cabinet along with a conglomeration of other boxes, bottles and whatnots.

Along may come a child whose attention is attracted to the mysterious collection, and before the mother or father is aware of it a poisonous tablet may have been swallowed. Even adults are not immune to the serious possibilities of the medicine cabinet. Reaching for a harmless remedy in the dark, or with attention diverted elsewhere, may bring fatal results to the man or woman doing the reaching. Many such cases are on record.

The danger is a real one. It is so real that the United States public health service has taken recognition of it in a warning in which it declares that the average person "messes up everything from common baking soda to bichloride of mercury tablets, despite the fact that doctors have issued warnings about the danger of having poisons in the home."

If poisons must be kept in the home, the proper way, of course, is to segregate them and to see that they are out of the reach of exploring children. Equal care should be taken to see that they are so placed that there will be no danger of a person mistaking them for a harmless remedy.

IT NEVER CHANGES

Rural America is now in the midst of another county fair season, exhibiting, comparing and judging the products of the soil and the handiwork of the farm home in friendly though spirited competition and for the mutual benefit of all.

In hundreds of thousands of exhibits the true spirit of America shines forth in a steady light—the calm confidence of men and women in their ability to wrest a living from the soil; the pride in homely achievement; the neighborly helpfulness and good-natured rivalry for first prizes; the renewing of old acquaintances; the assertion of an optimism and courage which no depression can dismay; the healthful co-mingling of city people and rural folk.

Not in hundred years does the county fair change. Grandchild sees it as grandfather did in his youth, with its pens of prize livestock, tables of canned goods, needlework and blue ribbon fruit, vegetables and grain, trotting races on the track, interscholastic contests, the noisy midway and a thousand other attractions and distractions. It is always the same yet the country never tires of it. In that respect it is like the circus.

America owes much to the county fair—so does agriculture. More wonderful to gaze upon is a world's fair such as the Century of Progress but greater are the contributions of the county fair to the progress of rural America.

One trip to Europe is enough. It enables you to say, "The last time I crossed."

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issued at Bristol Feb. 19, 1874. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

The annual meeting of the Hulmeville Building Association, No. 3, was held on Monday evening, 16th inst. The following were elected officers for the ensuing year: President, Jesse G. Webster; vice president, Lewis P. Townsend; treasurer, John Johnson; directors, Silas Barclay, Edmund Daniel Severs, S. H. Harrison, C. S. Vandegrift, Jr., George Harrison.

Samuel Williams, milkman, son of John Williams, of this town, carries a revolver in his pistol pocket. Tuesday night, in reaching for his handkerchief he pulled out with it the pistol, which fell to the ground and went off. The ball entered his leg, passing around under the skin, inflicting a severe if not dangerous wound.

Richard Trudgen had his wrist badly sprained on Tuesday by being thrown from a wagon. He was driving James W. Martin's team near the bridge on Otter street, when a train coming suddenly around the curve startled the horse, which shied and threw him from his seat.

Grace & Taylor have just completed giving the ferry boat Elwood Doron a fresh coat of paint. The wood work above decks is grained in imitation of mahogany and English oak, and presents a fine appearance. The work does justice to the taste and skill of the firm.

Mrs. Mary Keim has sold the brick house on Radcliffe street above the Catholic Church for $5500, to Adolph DeRoche, a florist, who, we understand, Navigation of the Delaware is reopened.

The Good Templars of Bucks County will hold their next convention at Yardleyville on the 28th of February.

Twenty-five persons have professed conversions during the series of meetings that have been in progress for some time past at the New Hope Methodist Church.

WARMINSTER—Miss Annie Thompson, daughter of Charles Thompson, Esq., of Warminster, died of consumption last Friday. She was an exemplary young lady, a member of the Neshaminy Church in Warminster, and also a member of the choir of that church, and her untimely death is much lamented.

HULMEVILLE—The results of our borough election is as follows: Burgess, J. Ross Snowden; assessor, J. H. Knight; inspectors, F. W. Bennett, L. B. Rue; council, J. Carrie, Samuel Davidson, John Johnson, E. Townsend, E. G. Harrison, Jesse G. Webster.

The Agricultural meeting, last Monday evening, was quite a success. It was well attended, and interesting essays from Mr. William Dixon, of Hulmeville, and Mr. E. G. Harrison of Hulmeville, the one on Potato Growing, and the other on the Requirements of the Centennial. These and several other questions were discussed at some length. The display was also very creditable. At the next meeting, on the second Monday, in March, a poultry show is expected to be a striking feature.

On Monday evening, Mr. George Jamison, of Hartsville, delivered his lecture on "Nathaniel Irvin and His Times" in the Loller Academy at Hartboro. A large and appreciative audience listened to the lecturer, who gave them an account of the eminent men of the vicinity, and a description of the famous Log College and the names of the first settlers and the kind of people they were.

"But there is this point of difference: Montgomery county remained consistently Republican in electing, by an increased plurality over last year, your humble servant, as senator, on an anti-New Deal platform, over the hand-picked candidate of the Democratic state organization who campaigned as a New Dealer; the Rhode Island district has completely reversed itself, for the first time in history, in changing from Democratic to Republican. What is more, it over-turned a Democratic plurality of over 21,000 in the Congress vote of last year and a 14,000 margin for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 into a Republican plurality of over 12,000.

"It is futile for Democrats to seek to show that for ten years before the last presidential election this Rhode Island district elected Republican congressmen, for it is not the same district, having been reapportioned in 1930.

"This latest election should be evidence enough that the people are aroused to the present unconstitutional, unsound, evil and socialistic trend of the national administration. This feeling is so emphatically expressed as to leave little room for doubt that the pendulum of popular sentiment is swinging back in New England, just as it was swinging back in Pennsylvania.

"The processing taxes, bringing with them damage and destruction to the textile industry; the radical new tax bill, the utilities death sentence and other ills all figured prominently in the repudiation by the voters and were the actuating influences in the result. What has happened in New England and Pennsylvania, it is fair to assume, is only a forerunner of what is going to happen in the nation as a whole next year.

"Yes, indeed, Rhode Island has revolted against this Administration. It gave Mr. Roosevelt its electoral vote, as it gave Al Smith its electoral vote four years before, but now a strong Democratic congressional district has elected a Republican Congressman by a majority of over 11,000 votes, a majority that surprised the victors quite as much as it did the vanquished.

"The slogan of the Republican party should be 'Stand by the Constitution.'

"On the fourth day of March, in the year 1801, a man whom the people of this country, unfortunately, are tending to forget, took the oath of office, and became the first Democratic President of the United States. His name was Thomas Jefferson, and he was the greatest American scholar of his day, and many incline to think its greatest scholar. Well, here are a few of his words from that first inaugural address:

"Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political; peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations—entangling alliances with none (it was he and not Washington who said this); the SUPPORT OF THE STATE GOVERNMENTS in all their rights, as the most competent administration for our domestic concerns and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies;

"THE PRESERVATION OF THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT IN ITS WHOLE constitutional vigor, as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad;—freedom of religion; freedom of press; freedom of person under the protection of the habeas corpus; and trial by juries impartially selected—these principles form the bright constellation which has gone before us, and guided our steps through an age of revolution and reformation."

"We have another Democratic President today, a very amiable gentleman, ordinarily, according to all accounts, and one who has won many by the cordiality of his smile; but his words—do they have quite the ring of those which emanated from the men who created the party to which our President belongs? Thomas Jefferson believed in liberty, in the liberty of the individual; he thought that the best government was the one that governed least, and that a business man probably knew more about his business than any of the General Johnsons of his day.

"The N. R. A. decision by the Supreme Court had consequences in Washington that were completely unpredictable before that high court read the Blue Eagle's death warrant. Instead of curbing the Administration's mania for unconstitutional legislation, it resulted in drives for new laws of questionable legality on several fronts.

"The Wagner labor bill was the first. Although the Supreme Court's ruling expressly stated that the Congress had no power to enact laws regulating capital-labor relations, the Wagner bill, repeating the unconstitutional mistakes of section 7a, sailed triumphantly through to a presidential signature.

"At present the processing-tax provisions of the AAA are heavily under fire as unconstitutional.

"The social security bill, which recently became a law, while probably safer than the first two, has also raised a chorus of criticism of similar vein.

"The Guffey coal stabilization bill, stemming from the White House, is another object of enflames.

"Mr. Roosevelt's attitude to all this is, to say the least, unique. His memory of an event that occurred not yet two and a half years ago—his taking of the oath to 'preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States' may have become so vague that by now it seems to be something that happened to another man.

"It would, at least, appear so in the light of some of his recent statements. His 'horse and buggy' blast, informally delivered to newspapermen after the Schechter decision, was perhaps partly attributable to bitter disappointment. But in his oath of office entirely consistent with an attitude which finds expression in such a statement as this made (in regard to the Guffey bill) to a House sub-committee —that the committee should 'not permit doubts as to constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation.' If to 'preserve, protect and defend' the Constitution means to shove through the Congress laws the constitutionality of which is not even 'reasonable' then a convention of lexicographers should be called immediately to find new and autonymous meanings for 'preserve, protect and defend.' Or perhaps the Congress will do it for the President. It has done about everything else he has wanted.

"On page two, column eight of The Philadelphia Inquirer, of Wednesday morning, August 21, 1935, under the head lines, 'EARLE PUSHES BOOM FOR SLATED JURISTS,' sub-head, 'EARLE'S View on Courts,' appears the following language:

"Think what it means," the Governor declared in reference to Barnes, "to keep on the bench a man who can keep alive the torch of liberalism, and write dissenting opinions even if we can't control the court."

"I read this statement, attributed to Mr. Earle, several times before I could believe it possible that the chief executive of this State could be so bold as to declare publicly his desire, not only to have his good friend, Mr. Barnes, elected a Justice of the Supreme Court of this State, only for the purpose of writing dissenting opinions, and that his main objective was to have personal control of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, to carry out his every whim."

"Thus the Governor of this State is following a notable example in refusing to abide by the opinions of our highest courts, and seeking personal control, if possible, of the individual members of these Tribunals.

"Shame, thrice shame, upon any public official who dares to place the courts of this land in his political program, merely to satisfy the ambition of his INORDINATE ambition, now grown on a more grandiose scale.

"My friends, the assaults upon the Constitution of our land, that make hideous the air of Washington, constitute the most menacing contemporary threats against American Liberty. President Roosevelt said three years ago that the United States Constitution has proven itself the most marvelously elastic compilation of rules of government ever written, but, of course, the Democratic platform of 1932 had not been formulated at that time. Lord Brougham once said that not one of the so-called reforms in history would have succeeded, if those who supported it had dreamt to what it was destined to lead."

"We Republicans have an issue which we did not seek, but which has come to us. It is 'Stand by the Constitution.' Let us be worthy of it, intelligent enough to see it and seize it, and with it elect a Republican President."

Edward G. Blester, president Middle District Republican Association, and Neal Nolan, president of the Morrisville Republican Association, presided over the respective meetings.

The sports program at Morrisville began with games for boys, girls and men and these were conducted during the entire afternoon. Councilmen John Sumner and Paul Nichols, Borough Solicitor Willard Curtin and Isaac Scott conducted these games. The quoit tournament in charge of Councilman Edwin Greenlee was also conducted during the entire afternoon.

The ladies held a card party in the grove and this was largely attended. The committee was headed by Mrs. Ruth Heenan. There was a door prize and many awards for the players.

The real feature was the game of softball between Common Council and the School Board, played on the baseball diamond between five and six o'clock. The School Directors whalloped the Borough Fathers to the tune of 16 to 8, and the game had to be called at the end of the fourth inning to permit the remainder of the program to continue. Common Council lined up with Assessor Frank Miller, pitcher; Justice of the Peace Neal Nolan, catcher; Borough Secretary William H. Howell, first base; Constable Andrew Thompson, short stop; Borough Engineer Harry H. Lee, third base; Councilman Paul Nichols, centre field; Councilman A. T. Lynch, centre field; Councilman John Sumner, left field; Borough Treasurer Watson J. Simons, right field; Borough Solicitor Willard Curtin, second base; Mahlon MacPherson, left field.

The School Board lined up with Raymond Bunting, second base; Marty Morrell, third base; Isaac Scott, centre field, and the following directors: A. R. Pratt, pitcher; J. Leslie White, catcher; Joseph Heenan, first base; William O'Neill, short stop; William Anderson, left field; and Secretary of the Board W. R. Taylor, right field. A. Harry Clayton, chairman of the Republican county committee, and Frank A. Smith, umpire, the game.

The High School Band, with the faculty director, Harry Flier, conducting, gave a concert in front of the grand stand. Earl Wood, student director of the band last year, also assisted in directing at this concert.

A vaudeville program was also enjoyed.

Rogers Doubted His Ability As An Actor

with Frank Hawks, the speed flier, visiting several cities a day in behalf of the drought relief.

In 1931, he flew to Nicaragua to assist in relief activities after the earthquake there, and contributed $5,000 of his own.

In 1933-34, he donated $20,000 for continuing Red Cross public health nursing in places where it had been cut off by the depression.

John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, observed that when St. Peter stopped him at the pearly gates and asked him by what right he expected to enter he would reply:

"Because I knew Will Rogers."

And St. Peter would say:

"That is sufficient; come right in."

Will Rogers' charitable generosity did not wait for its manifestation until he had become a millionaire. As far back as 1915, when he was just at the threshold of success, a friend of his followed him unobserved one morning on a mysterious errand into a slum section of St. Louis.

There he surprised the comedian as Rogers was passing some money into the hand of an old woman who had just been dispossessed from her apartment. Will was furious at being discovered.

"For heaven's sake," he pleaded, "don't tell this around. They will just think it was a publicity stunt, and it wasn't."

No, it wasn't a publicity stunt; it was Will Rogers being himself—doing one of the things which the world grew to love and expect in him.

SEEDPACKERS TAKE BOTH IN DOUBLE BILL

BOXERS ANXIOUS TO FACE FOES IN THE RING HERE

Giving a fine demonstration of hitting power, the Landreth Seed Company baseball nine took both ends of a double-bill over the week-end. With 24 hits to its credit, the team scored one-sided victories over Media A. A. and Burlington by scores of 11-3 and 14-2, respectively. Both games were played on Leedom's field.

The Landrethmen took both contests handily, counting runs and base hits galore. Those players who shared in the hitting glory on Saturday gave way to other players who socked the apple at a fast gait yesterday. In all twenty-four blows only one home run was made and that was by Sid Purcell with one on base in the tilt against the Jersey Club yesterday.

The fielding of the Bristolians featured the contest. Two misplays were chalked up against the winners, breaking their scoreless game streak which had reached three straight. The Medians proved poor fielders, committing eight errors, several of which helped the Bristol boys to runs.

Youngest of Champions

By BURNLEY

One of the most sensational child prodigies in sport history burst into the headlines last month during the Women's National Swimming Championships, when 11-year-old Mary Hoerger of Miami, beat the world's best women divers to win the national 10-foot-board honors in a startling upset.

Little Mary, a thin wisp of a kid with straw-colored hair and the mahogany tan of a lifeguard, has only been competing for three years, and now she wears the crown of the world's greatest springboard diver, thus giving the lie to Mickey Riley's contention that it takes from five to seven years to make a good diver.

Credit for this child marvel's success must be given to her mother, who teaches swimming in a Florida school. Mrs. Hoerger taught little Mary to swim almost before she was out of the cradle. At the age of 11 months she could swim forty feet—believe it or not! At six years, she was an accomplished diver; and now, at eleven years, she is the youngest diver ever to hold a national crown.

Opposed by such sterling opposition as Dorothy Poynton Hill, Olympic champion, who is recognized as the best diver in the world at present, and Claudia Eckert, indoor 10-foot-board queen, the tiny Florida phenom went into her last dive trailing by a few points, and then did the impossible by successfully attempting a two-and-one-half somersault—the first time this difficult and dangerous dive has ever been achieved in women's competition.

This amazing feat enabled her to nose out Mrs. Hill, who was having an off day, and Janice Lifson, the metropolitan champion, who trailed Mary by less than a point.

It is really marvelous to think that next year a tiny 12-year-old child will be the leading contender for the Olympic springboard diving title.

LANDRETH SEEK TO ADD ANOTHER TO LIST

With 19 victories safely tucked under their belt, the Landreth Seed Packers seek to add another to their list tonight on Leedom's field when they meet the strong Palmyra team. This game is scheduled to begin at six o'clock sharp.

The Landrethmen are playing better ball now than they did at the early stage of the ball campaign. They have won eight of their last ten games, and in their last five tilts have committed but two errors. The players are soaking the horse-hide at a very fast clip, connecting for twenty-four hits over the week-end in two contests.

Turner Ashby will be sent to the hill against the Jersey club. Ashby was not used in the last three tilts and feels as if his arm is ready to hook the Jersey club into submission. Sid Purcell, hard-hitting catcher, will receive the slants of Ashby. Manager Landreth will make no change in the remainder of the line-up.

PLAY CONTINUES IN TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Paris is matched with Bob White. Zeffries has Jimmy Viscuso and Sciarra has to contend with Alfred Turnatino. The three Nativity boxers have a great deal of experience over the localities but the Bristolians are hard punchers and may land a blow which may decide the bout.

"Chet" Castor's opponent in the wind-up is not known at the present time. Castor was originally scheduled to meet Kenny Williams but Matchmaker Sammy Moffo yesterday received word that Williams could not go on with the bout and a substitute will go on after he is sanctioned by the commission. Castor was beaten in his last go with Johnny Ferrara, of the Mason Club but he put up a game battle against his more experienced foe and received the plaudits of the fans.

MORRISVILLE SQUAD OFF FOR WEEK'S CAMP

More than 40 students of the Morrisville high school, all candidates for the varsity football eleven, left Sunday for the annual football camp which will be conducted all this week at Salford, Pa., along the Perkiomen. The boys will return home Saturday night.

The coaching staff, which is composed of John Hoffman, Earl Reist, Isaac Scott and John Gontar, augmented with "Sonny" Church of Notre Dame, Dennis Vitelli of the University of Illinois, and Ted Texier of Fordham, will have charge of drilling the boys.

Miss Margaret Watkins, a member of the High School faculty, assisted by Miss Alberta Moon, Miss Vivian Burns and Miss Marion Johnson will look after the cooking. Miss Watkins and these girls will live in a cottage where they will cook and serve the meals, while the boys and the coaches will live under canvas.

Last year the candidates for the team were trained at this same camp and it proved very successful for the team. In addition to training two hours each morning and two hours each afternoon the boys are given an opportunity for other diversions. A baseball game with a team from one of the nearby towns will be arranged and there will be many other activities.

at third base. Players and spectators swarmed the field and a fan attacked McGary, Dolington's manager. But soon the noise was quieted and the game continued to be finished.

The Cornhuskers outhit the Under-takers, 14-8. For eight frames the tilt was nip and tuck, with the Huskers holding a 4-3 lead. In the eighth, however, the Dols pushed over three runs to clinch the embryo, but pushing over three runs. In the ninth, Frank Griggs made himself a committee of one to score a run by slamming out a Homer. Hill, Griggs, and Lewellen had three hits each. Hill had a double and two singles.
